New California Elections and Policy Poll Shows Fiona Ma Leading Lieutenant Governor Field With Nearly 2-to-1 Advantage Over Democratic Rivals
State Treasurer Fiona Ma Leads All Candidates in New Survey Conducted by CSU Long Beach, USC, and Cal Poly Pomona

SACRAMENTO, CA — A newly released California Elections and Policy Poll conducted by researchers at California State University, Long Beach, the University of Southern California, and California State Polytechnic University, Pomona shows California State Treasurer Fiona Ma leading the race for Lieutenant Governor.

The poll shows Ma holding a nearly 2-to-1 lead over her Democratic rivals in the field, both of whom polled in single digits. Former Republican State Senator Gloria Romero received the second-highest level of support at 11 percent.

The results underscore the strength of Ma's statewide coalition and her reputation as the most experienced candidate in the race. As California's State Treasurer, Ma oversees the state's finances and has managed California's economic resources through some of the most challenging fiscal periods in recent history.

"Californians understand that experience matters," said Fiona Ma. "I am grateful for the broad coalition of support we continue to receive across California, and I will continue fighting every day to deliver results for working families, small businesses, students, seniors, and communities throughout our state."

Ma has built one of the broadest coalitions in the race, earning endorsements from more than 50 labor organizations, over 600 local elected officials, and approximately 75 percent of the California Legislature. Her campaign has also received the sole endorsements of the California Labor Federation, California Professional Firefighters, California Nurses Association, Equality California, and the California Farm Bureau.

The June 2 primary election is now underway, with voting centers open throughout California and ballots continuing to be returned across the state.
